YOUR PROBLEMS

by Ann Landers

'A Courtship Will Tell You . . .'

Dear Ann Landers: My dear sister died two months ago in childbirth. It was her first child and her husband is filled with grief. He turned the baby over to me to raise and I intend to bring her up as if she were my own.

I am 35 years of age and have never married. The baby's father is a fine man and I know he is terribly lonely. We have had some long talks and without coming right out and asking, I'm pretty sure he would marry me. I would accept his proposal in a minute, but I'm afraid of what people might say.

Under the circumstances I'm sure my sister would approve. It would be wonderful for the baby, too, to grow up with her own father.

Please give me your thinking on this very important matter. I am going to take your advice.—LOUISVILLE WOMAN

Dear Woman: A four or five month courtship period will tell you what you want to know. Never mind what anyone else says or thinks. If you two get along well together and wish to marry, go ahead.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm 18, graduated from high school last June and went steady with Steve for three straight years. I know what you think of going steady and you are right, but I was too dumb to see it. Steve was the most attractive boy in school and I was plain-looking. I was scared to relax my grip for fear some girl would get him away.

After graduation he began to cool off. He seemed to go out of his way to start an argument. Finally he blew up and said, "Find someone else to haul you around. I feel like you've got me in chains!" That was the way our three-year romance ended.

Now I'm marooned. My telephone never rings, except for a few girl friends who want to know if I've killed myself yet. How can I get back into circulation? Where do I start? Please help me before I dry up and blow away.—FADING FAST

Dear Fading: A girl who has worn an "Occupied" sign around her neck for three years can hardly expect the fellows to beat her door down (Continued on Page 10)
